

M&A Activity Has Rebounded Strongly Since the Earlier Stages of the Pandemic

M&A activity was broadly impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic, mostly throughout the second quarter of 2020. However, as businesses and other market participants began to observe more visibility into their supply chains and customer demand patterns, the volume of transactions expanded significantly. Business Services has remained a sector of high interest for M&A activity, as evidenced by transaction volume across many of its sub-segments returning to pre-pandemic levels after slowdowns the 2nd quarter. Overall, the number of deals within the Business Services sector declined only 11% in 2020, in spite of the challenges resulting from the pandemic.

Most of the full year decline was attributable to state mandated business shutdowns across the country in the early stages of the pandemic, and the uncertainty felt throughout most of the economy. Since May though, the uncertainty has progressively faded away and deal volume has consistently increased. Sequentially, Q3 deal activity was up 38% over Q2 levels, while volume continued to increase throughout the year. Furthermore, Q4 volume increased 22% over Q3.

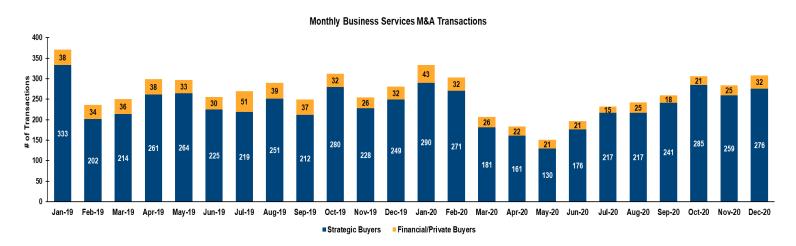

The slowdown in M&A activity during the second quarter related primarily to strategic acquirers focusing inward on their own businesses and private equity investors re-directing their attention to their portfolio companies, versus evaluation of new acquisition opportunities. Additionally, lenders became more cautious, thereby making the financing of transactions more challenging. In the second half of the year, buyers came off the sideline with a more aggressive approach to deal activity in the wake of increased market confidence and more visibility observed by businesses and many of the broader participants to M&A processes. Activity has remained strong in 2021, as most strategic acquirers and private equity investors have continued to aggressively pursue M&A at a similar pace in the first couple of months of the year, and in line with what was observed in the second half of 2020.

EdgePoint expects that M&A activity will continue to increase throughout the year. Buyer interest to pursue attractive acquisition opportunities remains very high, and business owners are seeing their sales volumes return to sustainable, pre-pandemic levels. Additionally, uncertainty in Washington around tax policy and capital gains tax rates in the future is creating a sense of urgency for sellers to try and get ahead of any adverse changes to tax legislation.

Key Metrics

In the second half of 2020, most of the M&A activity within the Business Services industry has occurred broadly within larger sub-sectors: IT Services & Software (58.7%), Commercial & Industrial Services (22.3%), and Business Process Outsourcing (14.7%).

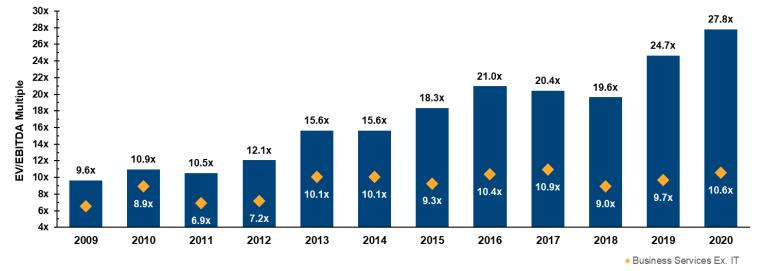

Similar to the first half of the year, the mix slightly shifted in favor of the IT Services & Software segment. This trend continues to reflect the sub-sector's resiliency during the pandemic. Furthermore, the broader trend towards digitalization has accelerated throughout the past several months. Despite many software businesses faring well during the pandemic, some smaller companies struggled. This led to more M&A activity for strategic acquirers seeking opportunistic transactions at perceived valuation discounts in order to bring attractive (and slightly struggling) operators onto their platforms.

Activity in the Commercial and Industrial services segment has also remained steady. The strength of this segment has been led by activity in the HVAC, Environmental, and Facility Services sub-sectors. In fact, some of these segments (e.g., HVAC) are experiencing what EdgePoint believes is the best M&A market ever for the industry. In essence, businesses with recurring maintenance have continued to perform well and, in many cases, grow throughout 2020. Many of these types of companies are selling for high single digit, and in some cases, double digit EV / EBITDA multiples, reflecting strong buyer interest for high quality businesses that can aggressively expand market share in a fragmented industry.

Overall, EV / EBITDA valuation multiples in the broader Business Services Segment, excluding IT Services/Software (which primarily trades on EV / Revenue), have ticked up slightly from 2019 levels, from 9.7x to 10.6x. This suggests that the market continues to search for quality targets that can withstand challenging environments, and buyers are willing to pay attractive prices for them.

IT Services & Software

Target:

VERAFIN

Acquirer:

Nasdaq, a global leader in financial technology, acquired Verafin, a provider in antifinancial crime management solutions, to create a global software as a service ("SaaS") leader against financial crime. Verafin's anti-money laundering, fraud platform, and client breadth will complement Nasdaq's leading trade and market surveillance solutions.

- The acquisition accelerates Nasdaq's ongoing evolution into a leading SaaS technology provider and significantly strengthens its existing regulatory and anti-financial crime solutions by integrating Verafin's capabilities across its entire network.
- Verafin's capabilities will be expanded to service a global ecosystem of Tier-1 and Tier-2 banks and broker-dealers, many of which currently leverage Nasdaq's technology to detect market manipulation and abuse.

Sub-Sector Profile: Red Hot M&A Market for HVAC and Plumbing Services

The HVAC and Plumbing Services market is comprised of service providers that install new, used, and replacement equipment, and perform a variety of maintenance, repair, and consulting services for homeowners and other residential real estate customers.

The HVAC and Plumbing Services market is a very large and highly fragmented industry without anyone player controlling a large percentage of the revenues. According to IBIS World, by 2025, the HVAC Services market is projected to be a $15 billion per year market that consists of thousands of players nationwide.

Over the past several years, there has been a significant amount of M&A activity in the Residential HVAC / Plumbing Market across a diverse group of buyer types; including large and medium-sized strategic acquirers, private equity firms with an established platform investment pursuing add-on acquisitions, and private equity and family office investors completed new platform investments.

The robust M&A activity the market is experiencing from both primary, and secondary financial sponsors, as well as corporate consolidators is driving attractive valuation multiples for sellers. EdgePoint believes this industry segment is experiencing one of the best M&A markets ever.

Attractive Fundamentals of Residential HVAC Plumbing Service Providers

Recession Resistant Business Model

Annually recurring, nondiscretionary customer spending that does not typically correlate with macroeconomic cycles

Recurring Maintenance

Maintaining HVAC systems are essential and results in nondiscretionary spending

✓ Increasing Population of Millennials

Shifting demographics in which majority of millennials are unwilling or unable to "fix it"

✓ Working Remote Culture

Increased residential service calls as a result of people working from home keeps HVAC systems running overtime

Demand for Air Quality

Renewed concern over air filtration and the air people

Residential: Corporate Consolidators and Private Equity Platforms

The following presents several of the active strategic consolidators and private equity platforms that have been active in M&A transactions over the past few years.

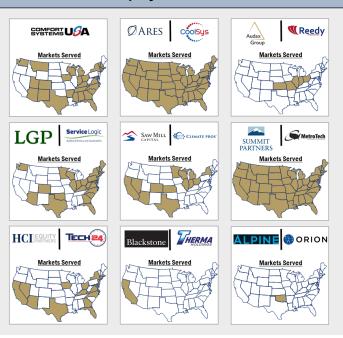

Consistent, Reliable Performance, with Large-Scale Consolidation is Motivating Buyers to Aggressively Pursue Growth Acquisitions at Attractive Valuations

Sub-Sector Profile: Red Hot M&A Market for HVAC and Plumbing Services

Similar to the Residential market, the same services for commercial services has been a hot sector for M&A activity, supported by strong fundamentals of sellers and robust acquisition interest from strategic consolidators and private equity platforms.

Commercial: Corporate Consolidators and Private Equity Platforms

Attractive Fundamentals of Commercial HVAC Service Providers

Recession Resilience

Annually recurring, nondiscretionary spending uncorrelated to economic cycles

Critical Infrastructure with Recurring Maintenance Maintaining HVAC systems are essential to commercial and industrial use buildings

Large Purchasers Support Recurring Contracts
Repair and maintenance service contracts are recurring in nature and offer heightened revenue visibility

Increasing Commercial Service Calls
Essential service buildings continue to work overtime since the pandemic

Safety Concerns
Renewed concern over air filtration and the air people
breathe at work

A number of the active consolidators (both strategic acquirers and private equity platforms) for commercial HVAC service providers are shown to the left

Most Consolidators are Frequent Acquirers

Corporate consolidators and private equity firms view HVAC service providers as an industry with significant consolidation potential. With thousands of independent firms operating across the nation, the market is highly fragmented and consolidators believe many of them would benefit from a growing regional or even national presence. These factors, along with the recession resistant nature of the demand patterns, and the overall opportunity to scale, many private equity firms and strategic acquirers are aggressively pursuing growth today by acquiring established HVAC contractors (some multiple transactions per year).

As the table to the right shows, many of these players have executed multiple transactions over the past several years with the support of their private equity partners to continue consolidating the industry.

In just the past few months, there have been several new platform investments completed by private equity firms, which further suggests the attractive, on-going investment thesis and desire to grow via acquisition. Furthermore, the secondary market (primary private equity investors exiting out of their platform investments) also remains highly active, as larger private equity firms seek even more aggressive M&A strategies.

Sub-Sector Profile: Red Hot M&A Market for HVAC and Plumbing Services

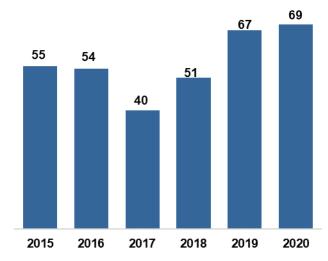

The U.S. HVAC and Plumbing Service sector's 2020 M&A volume increased over 2019 by 3%, despite the macroeconomic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. Although there was temporary softness in April and May of 2020 during the initial lockdown months, M&A activity has rebounded strongly.

M&A activity increased 130% in Q3 over Q2, and 44% in Q4 over Q3 with year-over year activity essentially flat, even with the Q2 slowdown. In the late summer and fall, private equity firms began investing in additional platforms and were willing to pay aggressive multiples due to recurring service needs and customers proven nondiscretionary needs.

The HVAC industry has performed very well through the pandemic and acquirors remain attracted to assets in the space.

2021 Expectations: Continued Strategic Consolidation and M&A Activity is Expected to Remain Strong

What are some of the Industry Experts Saying?

"The commercial and industrial HVAC space is a highly fragmented industry with several thousand contractors scattered across the U.S. Although there are some unique aspects to each contractor, the vast majority of services they provide are similar—so, we focus on those businesses with key relationships built over decades to provide a leg up against the competition...We've done 15 acquisitions to date and have only begun to scratch the surface of our M&A Strategy."

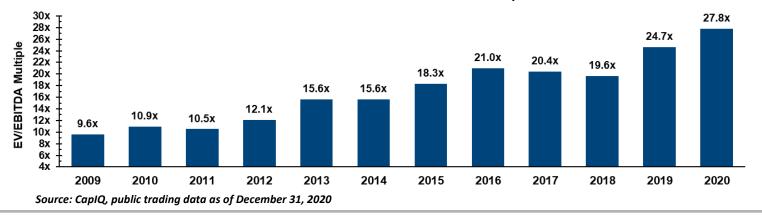

Karan Aggarwal,
 Vice President of Corporate Development at CoolSys

"What HomeServe stands for – making home repairs and improvements easy – has never been more important. The stresses of living and working through a pandemic mean that we are all more aware than ever of the value of home comforts. Our strong policy retention in the first half underscores the value our Membership customers place on the service we provide...The latest wave of lockdowns has made no fundamental difference to our operations, and the good news for us and our customers is that engineers can continue to work in peoples' homes."
